Not illustrated. 1907 Excerpt: .to talk about, and, more especially, when to stop talking. Let him study his town and country in which he lives and where he expects to work in the future. He must get acquainted with the business men, and he cannot do this by staying at home all day, sitting in the rocking-chair. To apply the old proverb, People that have nothing to do are soon tired of their own company. At the end of the seventh year in school the boy knows that the following year he will have this study, among others, and should be encouraged to bring back all the data possible as to the business men he has talked to, geography or lay of the land, car lines, real estate values, stores, number and kind, banks, building loan associations, etc.; in other words, something to draw on to aid him and his relatives and friends in locating a business and site for this budding salesman. The more pains taken in the beginning to size up the situation, the less likelihood of failure. Failure! There is no such word in all the bright lexicon of speech, unless you yourself have written it there. Next, give him method and system--method in keeping himself and his stock in trade in shape; system in buying. This part, of course, will come toward the end of the year, near the time for direct contact with things as they are. Work out and polish the selling arguments so...
